But this year, Halloween was different. Hoppy's friends were all going to a Halloween party, and he wasn't invited. Hoppy was so sad. He didn't want to miss out on all the fun.

So Hoppy decided to go trick-or-treating by himself. He put on his favorite costume, a fluffy white bunny suit, and grabbed his pumpkin basket. Hoppy went from house to house, saying "Trick-or-treat!" in his cutest voice.

People were so happy to see Hoppy. They gave him lots of candy and even some toys. Hoppy was having so much fun that he forgot all about being sad.

As Hoppy was walking home, he saw a little girl sitting on her porch. She was crying because she had lost her favorite doll. Hoppy felt sorry for the little girl, so he gave her his pumpkin basket full of candy and toys.

The little girl was so happy. She thanked Hoppy and gave him a big hug. Hoppy was glad that he had been able to help her.

Hoppy continued on his way home, feeling happy and content. He had had a wonderful Halloween after all.

Hoppy Halloween is a heartwarming and whimsical story about the importance of friendship and kindness. It is a perfect book for children of all ages to enjoy during the Halloween season.
