Sarah's story begins with her childhood in a small town in the Midwest. She was the middle child of three, and her family was close-knit and loving. Sarah was a happy and carefree child, but her life took a tragic turn when she was just 10 years old.

Sarah's father was killed in a car accident, and her family was devastated. Sarah struggled to cope with her grief, and she began to withdraw from her friends and family. She felt lost and alone, and she didn't know how to move on.

As Sarah got older, she began to find healing through her love of photography. She loved capturing the beauty of the world around her, and she found that photography helped her to express her emotions.

Sarah's photography eventually led her to a new love. She met her husband, John, at a photography workshop, and they quickly fell in love. John was kind and supportive, and he helped Sarah to heal from her father's death.

Sarah and John were married a few years later, and they had two beautiful children. Sarah was finally happy again, but her happiness was short-lived.

In 2010, Sarah was diagnosed with breast cancer. She underwent surgery, chemotherapy, and radiation, and she fought the disease with all her might. But in 2012, Sarah's cancer came back, and this time, it was terminal.

Sarah was heartbroken, but she refused to give up. She wanted to make the most of the time she had left, and she wanted to create lasting memories for her children.

Sarah spent the last year of her life traveling with her family and friends. She went on safari in Africa, she visited the Great Wall of China, and she even went to the Oscars. She also wrote a book about her journey, which she dedicated to her children.

Sarah passed away in 2013, but her legacy lives on. Her memoir, Smile for the Camera, is a touching and inspiring story about love, loss, and laughter. It is a reminder that even in the darkest of times, we can find joy and meaning in life.

If you are looking for a book that will make you laugh, cry, and everything in between, then I highly recommend Smile for the Camera.
