A Visionary Birth

The genesis of Ineos, a petrochemical powerhouse, can be traced back to 1992, when a group of audacious entrepreneurs, led by Jim Ratcliffe, embarked on a bold mission. Their vision was to create a world-class industrial conglomerate that would reshape the global landscape of chemicals, energy, and automotive industries.

Strategic Acquisitions: A Path to Growth

In the years that followed, Ineos embarked on a series of strategic acquisitions, each carefully chosen to complement existing operations and expand their reach into new markets. From the acquisition of BP's North Sea assets in 2005 to the groundbreaking Free Download of the Grangemouth refinery in 2007, these bold moves solidified Ineos's position as a formidable player in the energy sector.
