Alice de Janzé

Alice de Janzé was born in 1899 into a wealthy and aristocratic family. She was a beautiful and intelligent woman, and she quickly became a popular figure in Parisian society. In 1922, she married Count Louis de Janzé, a French aristocrat. The couple had two children, but their marriage was not a happy one.

In 1930, Alice de Janzé met Lord Erroll, a British peer who was stationed in Kenya. The two quickly became close friends, and they soon began an affair. Lord Erroll

Lord Erroll was born in 1902 into a wealthy and aristocratic family. He was a handsome and athletic man, and he was known for his love of adventure. In 1934, he was appointed Governor of Kenya. Erroll was a popular and well-respected governor, but he also had a reputation for being a womanizer.

In 1940, Erroll met Alice de Janzé. The two quickly became close friends, and they soon began an affair. The affair lasted for several months, but it ended when Erroll was murdered in 1941.

The Murder of Lord Erroll

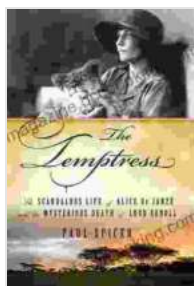

Lord Erroll was murdered on the night of January 24, 1941. He was shot in the back of the head while he was sitting in his car. The murder was never solved, and there have been many theories about who killed him and why.

One theory is that Erroll was killed by the British government because he was involved in a plot to overthrow the government. Another theory is that he was killed by his wife, who was jealous of his affair with Alice de Janzé. Still another theory is that he was killed by a white supremacist group who was opposed to his pro-African policies.

The Scandalous Life of Alice de Janzé

After Lord Erroll's murder, Alice de Janzé returned to France. She never remarried, and she died in 1993. In her later years, she wrote a memoir in which she claimed that she had been in love with Erroll and that she had always believed that he had been murdered by the British government.
