Billy the Bear loved his red balloons. He loved to play with them, bounce them, and even sleep with them. But one day, Billy woke up to find that all of his balloons were gone! He was so sad.

Billy asked all of his friends if they knew who had popped his balloons. But no one seemed to know. Billy was starting to get worried. He didn't know what he would do without his balloons.

One day, Billy was playing in the forest when he saw something red in the bushes. He went over to take a closer look and saw that it was one of his balloons! Billy was so happy! He ran home to tell his friends the good news.

Billy's friends were just as happy as he was. They all wanted to know who had popped Billy's balloons. Billy told them that he didn't know, but he was glad to have one of his balloons back.

The next day, Billy was playing in the forest again when he saw something red in the bushes. He went over to take a closer look and saw that it was another one of his balloons! Billy was so excited! He ran home to tell his friends the good news.

Billy's friends were just as excited as he was. They all wanted to know who had popped Billy's balloons. Billy told them that he still didn't know, but he was glad to have two of his balloons back.

The next day, Billy was playing in the forest again when he saw something red in the bushes. He went over to take a closer look and saw that it was the last of his balloons! Billy was so happy! He ran home to tell his friends the good news.

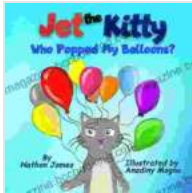

Billy's friends were just as happy as he was. They all wanted to know who had popped Billy's balloons. Billy told them that he finally knew who it was: it was the naughty little squirrel!

Billy's friends were surprised. They couldn't believe that the little squirrel had popped Billy's balloons. Billy told them that the squirrel had apologized for popping his balloons and had promised to never do it again.

Billy's friends were glad that Billy had found his balloons and that the squirrel had apologized. They all went back to playing in the forest, and Billy never lost sight of his balloons again.
